The reason I chose Garamond is because it is a very clean and modern font, and has a professional yet artistic flair - which is a feeling I want to establish right away.

The site will be primarily in Black & White, with the image content being the only colour brought in the pages. I did this because I have a fascination of the...

... yin & yang, and understand black & white is the most extreme representation of color contrast.

With Garamond, the use of Black & White site design, and focussing on editing quality images to contrast the site design (as well as be used as site navigation) will achieve the desired effect of having heavy blank space to supplement the photography.

This will naturally guide the eyes of the audience navigating my UI to all places of intended interest, streamlining how the audience intakes the content I want to present.

summary ix

Homepage

Index page which establishes the header, footer, and 4-part image in the main body which will act as navigation. When audience hovers over image link, an animation occurs which converts the colored image into greyscale through the usage of sprite images. When navigation is clicked, instead of going to a different page, it will instead open a lightbox which will show the container with the desired content. There will be an X on the top right of every lightbox so the audience can navigate out of that box.

About Me

A simple About Me page in lightbox.
Includes long text biography and a self-image.

Photography

Photography page in lightbox, includes a carousel-like feature containing 10 or more photography images. Clicking on the image will expand the image to full.

Music

A simple Music page in lightbox.
Includes an embedded spotify link to my album.

Writing

A simple Writing page in lightbox.
Includes long text, allowing me to showcase text-based HTML/CSS skills.

Contact

A serperate contact page (not lightbox), which is to be navigated through an image link in the bottom left of screen. Includes functionality to contact me, and to allow the consent of being put into a e-mail list. This will be a rudimentary method of developing a database.

Can navigate back to site by clicking top-left logo.
